

Thankful Amid The Wreckage

Coping with fire's aftermath

Scott Piro holds receipt for clothes he wanted to pick up at Wu's Cleaners, which was damaged.

By 8:30 a.m. Friday, some customers of Wu's Cleaners had already arrived, clutching pink receipts for clothes that were almost certainly irretrievable. Scott Piro held out hope for his five dress shirts and 12 pairs of slacks.

"If at some point I can get my clothes back, that would be great," said Piro, 33, a publicist from Sunnyside. "And if not, I want to file a claim, because I'm sure that the owner has insurance."
